

Braddock Finnegan Dermatology, P.C.
7911 West Center Road
Omaha, Nebraska 68124
(402) 390-0333 (available 24 hours)
www.braddockfinnegan.com

Care of Unstitched Surgical Sites

Your unstitched surgical site will be covered with an absorbent bandage when you leave the office. Leave this initial dressing in place until the next morning. At this time begin wound care twice daily. The wound should not freely bleed, although some pinpoint bleeding is acceptable. Soap and water will be sufficient for cleaning. After you clean the wound, apply a thin film of fresh Vaseline ointment and cover the wound with a Band-Aid or other non-stick dressing. We prefer Vaseline to antibiotic ointment because some people are allergic to antibiotic ointment. Most wounds ooze a small amount of serum for the first several days, and the dressing absorbs this. It is usually sufficient to change dressings twice daily. Unstitched surgical wounds heal faster when covered. The healing surface should not be allowed to become dry. The surface should be kept lubricated at all times with Vaseline. You should not allow a scab to form since this slows healing dramatically. Please call our office (we are available 24 hours) if your wound is bleeding excessively.

You may shower or otherwise get the wound wet briefly, as long as you clean the wound afterwards.

Infection is very rare in unstitched wounds. Signs of infection include pain, warmth, and increasing redness. Some redness is normal. However, if you suspect your wound is infected, please call us.

The wound should not have any (or very minimal) odor, and should not drain or bleed after approximately one week.

With regular care as described above, you can anticipate that shallow wounds such as a biopsy site will be covered with new skin within a week or so, although deeper wounds will take considerably longer. Please call our office if you believe the wound is not healing properly.

Please allow 10 days to 2 weeks for our office to contact you with results.

We appreciate the opportunity to participate in your skin care. Please contact us if we can provide any further information or answer any questions prior to your next appointment.